Allianz Group, one of the biggest insurance companies in the world with 100 million private and corporate customers in more than 70 countries and 150 000 employees, has signed a global agreement with AGE for the next two years.

“We couldn’t be happier about this partnership and to be a preferred supplier of Allianz. Together, we aim to continue to provide reliable and a high-quality service with professional and skilled glass technicians to our common customers,” mentioned AGE CEO & Chairman, Marco Moreno.

A few AGE members already collaborate with Allianz in their local region. With this new extended partnership AGE hopes to create new opportunities and conditions for their partners and members to increase collaboration.

During Allianz’s “Procurement meets AGE” initiative, AGE had the opportunity to discuss their glass claim digital integration process. Allianz and AGE also shared their sustainability projects, including mechanisms to increase repair ratio and decrease environmental impact and CO2 emissions.

This agreement is a result of AGE’s positive participation in several tenders, as well as the establishment of agreements with key international customers and suppliers - just one of the many steps in AGE’s strategy of creating tangible value, evolving, and remaining a relevant player in the automotive glass aftermarket industry.
